 Not only are we responsible for our own lives, but we are responsible for the lives of those around us. Not only is it important that we grow, nurture and share our gifts, but we should teach our children this same lesson and encourage others to do the same.

News and Notes from the Pastor's Desk

This is from an article by James Stenson, in which he promotes raising considerate kids:
 Some rules for responsibility at home — what is expected of everyone in the family:

- If we lose or break something, we replace it or pay for it or do without it.
- If we drop something, we pick it up.
- If we spill something or dirty something, we clean it up.
- If we eat off something, we clean it and put it away. If we borrow something, we return it to where it belongs.
- If we cause offense, we apologize.
- If we skip a chore, we will do it later during play time. (If we play when it's time for work, we will work when it's time for play.)
- If we're playing with a toy, and a sibling wants to join, we will let him (her) join or we put the toy away.
- If we get up out of a seat, we lose the right to it. (Parents excepted, of course.)
- If we're going to be late, we call.
- [For teens] If we borrow a car, we return it with at least a quarter-tank of gas. Non-compliance means non-use of the car next time we want it.
- We stay out of other people's belongings and personal affairs. (No commentary when a sibling is being corrected or punished.)
- We keep family affairs within the family; we keep others affairs (gossip) out of the family. We mind our own business.

These rules from James Stenson seem like common sense, but I would imagine every one of us and every family could use at least a bit more consideration of each other.

Mary, patroness of our parish and the Mother of God, pray for us.
 Fr. Beran
